I hope you have all had a good summer break and feel recharged for the new academic year. I have been delighted to see many of you at the recent conferences, highlights from which you are able to see on the following pages. September appears to have been particularly busy!

First, my congratulations to the elected members of the ICS Board. You can see the results on the front cover and I am sure you will agree that we have a very good representation from different regions and countries. I look forward to working with the Board for the benefit of the Society.

As was announced during Compumag Montreal, in 2019 the conference goes to Paris and I am delighted to recommend to you the technical article published in this issue written by members of the three laboratories which will organise the event. Enjoy the reading!

In the meantime the preparations for Compumag Korea are in full swing. You will all be familiar with the ConfTool system for submission and reviewing of papers and you will be pleased to learn that the arrangements will be identical to those at the last Compumag in Montreal. When preparing your submissions please note that there is a Word template designed specifically for the conference (the same as in 2015) and can be downloaded from the conference web site. Please do not use older versions as they may be incompatible with the current requirements! For those of you who are keen on LaTeX, a relevant template has also been prepared, but please bear in mind that we do not directly support this version and – as is the case with the IEEE – we recommend that the final pdf version is checked carefully against the published Word version. I look forward to seeing many submissions to Compumag Korea!
