Compumag 2025 in Naples, Italy, was a fantastic event, both in terms of the very high quality of presented papers and the opportunity for networking, not to mention the social aspects. A big thank you to our Italian friends, especially Alessandro Formisano as Chair, for creating such a wonderful atmosphere and for making all arrangements. The reviewing of extended papers for the post-conference publication in IEEE Transactions on Magnetics is still in full swing, so more work needs to be done.

Two more events have just been completed of interest to our community, OIPE Workshop and ISEF conference; those who attended I am sure will have very fond memories from the meetings, please look at a few photos in this issue to refresh your memories.

The voting to the Board of the International Compumag Society has also been completed, I have already circulated the results, but a reminder of the outcome may be found on the front page. Warm congratulations to all successful candidates.

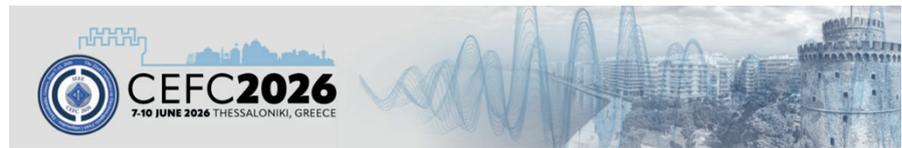

Nest year will see more conferences, in particular CEFC in Thessaloniki and EPNC in Tallin, both in June. May I also bring to your attention the IEEE InterMag in Manchester next April, especially the proposed one-day Symposium – to take place a day before the conference starts – which will bring together designers of electrical machines and those involved in developing methods and algorithms for design optimisation (the real world meets the virtual world). This meeting is still at the design stage so please watch this space (and indeed e-mail messages) for further information when available.

I wish you all a successful year ahead.
